A Day To Remember

The Gate Post March 12, 1981

by Kelly Costa

Prior to 7:30 a.m. teachers began to fill the College Center's 1839 Room. Signs were being taken out of storage and arranged in place in front of Dwight Hall.

Simultaneously, in Dwight Auditorium, chairs were being counted and the microphone was being tested.

While, in the Maynard Street parking lot, cars were being towed in order to make room for faculty cars and one helicopter (for Jim Martin, Chairman of the Board of Regents).

The day was Saturday, February 28, 1981. The day will go down in the history of Framingham State College as a very important and most gratifying day.

Reorganization— A Brief History

The day actually started years earlier. Funds were generously allotted to the state colleges and universities until the election of Governor Michael Dukakis. When Dukakis came into power, the steady flow of funds ceased.

At the same time, those legislators who strongly supported the state college system left their posts for a variety of different reasons.

Governor Dukakis' administration emphasized "budget control" and this hurt the colleges. However, Dukakis did support the idea of broadening the character of the system; he also favored the placement of more women and minorities on the governing boards of the schools.

In 1978, Edward J. King was elected as Massachusetts' new Governor. King supported private industry and its growth; he did not support the state's program of public higher education.

Reorganization, a word bannied about in the Legislature for years, started soon after King took office. Almost immediately, he asked the state colleges and universities to raise tached to the 1980-1981 state budget. The budget is a money document; reorganization deals with colleges and people. Yet, the two managed to become one.

Governor King's men on the Hill, namely Speaker of the House Thomas McGee of Lynn, Senate President William Bulger of South Boston, and Chairman of the House and Senate Ways and Means Committees—Rep. John Finnegan of Boston and Sen. Chester Atkins of Concord, instituted the rider.

The ironic thing was that, in 1978, a special commission was their tuitions in order to relieve the state from such expenses.

The message was becoming clear. The state wanted little to do with the state colleges.

July 1, 1980, as part of the reorganization bill, the post of Secretary of Education was abolished. The Governor managed to make obsolete the only spokesman of public higher education close to him.

The reorganization bill was hardly a bill. It was a rider at-formed to look into a plan for reorganizing the state colleges. The commission was just about due for a report to the full House. The rider undid two years of hard work and wasted thousands of tax dollars.

(A rider does not receive a "yea"/"nay" vote. The budget as a whole gets voted on and a "yea" vote accepts the budget and all riders; conversely, a "nay" vote rejects the budget and all riders.)

POLITICAL

The passage of the budget gave Governor King immense power. He was allowed to pick the entire Board of Regents and chose a Board of Trustees for each state college. In total, it granted King the power to make 239 political appointments.

The Board of Regents, often referred to as the "Superboard," was sworn in by the Governor last August. The Board consists of Chairman James Martin, An Wang, Dr. Charles Sanders, Ray Stata, ex-Governor Foster Furcolo, Dr. George Hazzard, Sister Janet Eisner, George Ellison, David Paresky, Robert Cushman, Norman Zalkind, David Beaubien, Arnold Friedman, Elizabeth Rawlins, Francis Nicholson. Paul Guzzi was named the Board's Acting Chief Administrator.

Framingham State College was chosen as the location for the swearing in of all of the Board of Trustees from all of the state colleges, community colleges and universities.

Saturday, February 28th

As the trustees, Regents, and guests approached Dwight Auditorium for the ceremony, they were greeted by about 100 faculty and AFSCME (American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees) workers holding signs.

The AFSCME workers had their signs draped around their necks. The teachers positioned signs, about 9 feet tall, around the area.

At 9:15, the ceremonies began with a welcoming speech delivered by D. Justin McCarthy, President of Framingham State College.

McCarthy said that it was most appropriate to have the swearing-in take place at Framingham State College. He said that FSC has played a "unique role" in public higher education, being that it is the "oldest state supported institution to prepare teachers in the United States."

Horace Mann, a lawyer, instituted public higher education. Mann believed in "equality of opportunity of education for all people."

James R. Martin, Chairman of the Board of Regents, followed McCarthy. He said, "Since the reorganization of all public higher education is a matter which will have profound consequences for our Commonwealth, these trustees have been selected by Governor King to assume an enormous responsibility. The Board of Regents and the local trustees will be taking a serious look at the quality of educational programs and services offered at every institution in order to achieve a well-coordinated system and promote the most responsible use of the state's resources."

Martin told the audience that the responsibilities of the new trustees are to "develop and maintain a comprehensive system of public education of high quality," prepare admission standards, prepare budgets, design new programs, decide tuition and administer plans of the system.

Martin concluded by saying: "I am sure we will be able to accomplish a great deal."

John Duff, Chairman of the Public College Presidents, was the next speaker.

Duff said that the Regents and trustees will "shape the future of higher education until the end of this century."

Duff also noted that Massachusetts is ranked 50th when it comes to the amount of tax revenue spent on public education. The state is also 50th in amount of money allotted in the budget (4%) for public education.

The most important task facing the new trustees, according to Duff, is being able to "keep atune to the changing attitudes in society."

Although Massachusetts is ranked 50th in the country on public higher education expenditures, Paul Guzzi, Chief Administrative Officer, noted the increase in money spent over the years due to inflation. In 1965, the budget was $35 million; in 1980 it was $340 million.

Guzzi told the trustees that, "our job today, and it is just beginning, is to make it work."

Chairman Martin warned the trustees to prepare their institutions for the future. If student loans do get cut, like President Reagan is asking Congress to do, Martin predicts that the colleges will be "glutted" with applicants. He does, however, admit that this "won't be easy."

Sister Janet Eisner and Norman Zulkine, President of Southeastern Massachusetts University also spoke.

Eisner emphasized the fact that the "strength of the state system will depend on the individual strengths of the colleges." She also emphasized the need of each institution to develop its own five year plan.

Zulkine said that the "education dollar must be managed." He also told the trustees to "set high standards" for their institutions.

Governor Edward J. King's appearance came late. As he entered the auditorium, everyone rose and give him an ovation.

Before his entrance, King was met outside Dwight Hall by the faculty and AFSCME workers. At that time, King promised George Damon, leader of the faculty's Ad hoc Faculty Committee, that he would meet with him after the day's events.

King began his speech by saying, "This is an historic occasion for the future of public higher education in Massachusetts. We could not purchase the kind of talent represented on these boards and the kind of leadership these trustees will bring to our colleges and universities."

King called the state and universities "a major resource for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

He also said that the state colleges "are among the finest in the country."

Speaker of the House of Representatives, Thomas McGee told the trustees that, "you assume a tremendous responsibility today...take this responsibility and do the best you possibly can."

McGee spoke well of the youth in the state when he said, "The best resource we have always had in this state is our young people...no matter where we go it depends on the youth of this country."

Senator Gerard D'Amico, Chairman of the Education Committee, was the last speaker at the ceremonies. He called reorganization "a time of great opportunity as well as challenge."

He also told the gathering that there is a "mutual responsibility between the government and the population." And, "We stand ready and willing to assist in any way to make the system work."

After the ceremony, the trustees had their pictures taken with the Governor.

While the Governor was with the trustees, the faculty vigil continued. Patiently, they awaited the time they would have with Governor King.

As the Governor emerged from Dwight Hall to meet with Mr. Damon, everyone converged on the stairs to the entrance of the Hall. Media, students, and faculty all awaited King's explanation with great anticipation.

King told Damon that he was unaware of the fact that the faculty and AFSCME workers never received their raises. He said he would speak to House Speaker McGee and tell him to rush it through the Legislature. King also told Damon to call his office in a few days to check on the procedures.

As the Governor drove away in his limousine, the crowd dispersed. The teachers, even Mary Murphy, President of the local Massachusetts Teachers Association, who was opposed to the vigil, was happy with the results.

During the ceremonies, a pro-life group of about 12 people had gathered in front of the College Center. They were there to show the pro-life King their disapproval of the abortion clinic which just opened in Framingham.

Sleet began to fall about an hour after the crowds had disappeared. It seemed the perfect ending of the day. The weather held off as a welcoming to the new trustees and a way to say "good luck." However, the sleet showed that the future will not be easy and often marked with circumstances beyond anyone's control.

The Future

The Board of Regents and Boards of Trustees have been completed and are in working order. Only the position of Chancellor remains to be filled.

However, it is not known when or if a student will be allowed to serve on the Board of Regents and on each of the Boards of Trustees. It is also not known if the student would be elected or appointed. It is known that Governor King, the Framingham State College Trustees, and many legislators support a student representative on both Boards.

The teacher's pay raises have not, as yet, been granted. Governor King claimed to have no knowledge of the fact that the allotted raise money was never received. Saturday, he found out and said he would help get the teachers their overdue raises. The teachers are still waiting.

It is imperative that the Board of Regents and Boards of Trustees receive input from the faculty, students and parents of the students as to what they feel to be the needs of the college.

Saturday, February 28th, 1981 was a landmark day for public higher education in the state of Massachusetts. It was also a landmark day for Framingham State College. The first normal school was the setting for the new beginning of the Massachusetts State College System.

Dedications

Dr. Betsy Harter had devoted over a decade of her life to teaching English literature to Framingham State College students. Her death as a result of a sudden illness in the spring of 1981 shocked and saddened everyone she had touched in any way.

To her colleagues, she was an intelligent, professional and personable addition to the college's English department. To her students, she was not only a widely knowledgeable and excellent instructor, but a concerned advisor who was eager to help in any area, course-related or not.

She will perhaps be remembered best for her spirited wit, both within and outside the classroom confines. Few others could inspire her students to chuckle over Lord Byron in the way Betsy Harter did.

Nothing could compensate for the loss of such an exceptional person whose influence left a lasting impression on a great number of students. We can only dedicate the 1980 - 81 Dial to her memory - but no one who knew her could ever truly forget her.

Sincerely,
Judith Tighe
Copy Editor

We also dedicate this yearbook to Dr. Gail E. Cosgrove, Executive Vice President of Framingham State College. Dr. Cosgrove was just sworn into Salem State's Board of Trustee, on February 28, 1981.

THE DIAL SINCERELY WISHES YOU GOOD LUCK AT SALEM STATE

GOOD-BYE DR. COSGROVE WE'LL MISS YOU

Sincerely,
Anderson Miller, Jr.
